

Diamondhead utility district answer expected

BY DENA BISNETTE
A decision regarding whether Diamondhead should have its own water and sewage district may be possible some time this month.

Last month, a group of residents and members of a recently formed association, Diamondhead Water and Sewer Improvement, Inc., showed support of the proposal for a new district by attending a public hearing conducted by the Hancock County Board of Supervisors.

So many people attended the four-hour hearing that they overflowed the boardroom, even after all standing room was used.

When the hearing was over, they were told they would have to wait for an answer until Board Attorney Gerald Gex could look into legal aspects of the situation.

"I had some reservations relative to the law and all the attorneys involved agreed to furnish briefs in support of their positions," the attorney said this week.

Gex said he may be able to bring the matter before the board on Friday if attorneys for the other parties concerned can meet a deadline he set for them.

Gex has given the attorneys a Monday deadline for submission of the briefs. If they cannot meet the deadline, he hopes to provide a report to the board at its July 31 meeting.

The attorneys from whom Gex is waiting to hear include Ben Stone, representing the utility company, and Steven Guice and Bill Manion, representing the residents and the improvement association.

The association wants the district because its members believe that the present system, now owned by Peter J. Casano, is inadequate and in poor condition.

The association is interested in buying the utility, which provides both water and sewerage, and operating it as a non-profit, publicly owned corporation.

Testimony presented at the hearing indicated that a private revenue bond issue is being proposed to finance the purchase, with user fees to pay for operation and maintenance.

According to Gex, the Mississippi statute allowing for the creation of a utility district also provides for a special tax levy upon request of those proposing creation of a new district.

So far, the residents petitioning the supervisors for creation of the district have not exercised that option.

According to Gex, that statute also restricts the creation of a utility district to those areas without existing utilities or where existing utilities have been found to be inadequate.

Stone has contended that the Mississippi Public Service Commission has stated that Diamondhead Utilities, Inc., has adequate water and sewerage in approving the sale to Casano. That sale occurred in May.

Stone also stated at the hearing that he believes the board of supervisors would be going against the ruling of the com-

Mayor's door now re-opened

BY DENA BISNETTE

A boarded-shut office door which became a word-of-mouth issue in the recent mayoral campaign is opening again.

Bay St. Louis Mayor Edward Favre and two city employees, Curtis Thomas Jr. and Greg Thomas, removed a piece of wall Saturday to reopen a doorway which once connected city hall's reception area with the mayor's office.

The reopening of the door, which was closed during the last year of the previous mayor's administration, allows Favre his first opportunity to keep a campaign promise.

He had promised to make the mayor's office accessible again, in practice as well as literally. While the doorway was sealed off, the only way to enter the mayor's office was through another office occupied by an administrative assistant.

"An open door is the first step in urging the participation of the public, by providing accessibility," Favre said.

The new mayor plans to fill the open doorway in keeping with a renovation project which preserved some of the historical details of the city hall building a couple of years ago—by re-installing the same door and transom which were removed.

"Fortunately, they kept the same door," he commented.

Sores on fish cause concern for fishermen

BY D.C. HARVILL

An outbreak of "ugly, bloody sores" on fish being caught in Bay St. Louis and its tributaries has some fishermen concerned about its cause and whether their catches are safe to eat.

According to Elliot Snellings of Waveland, who has fished the bay for more than 35 years, the number of sore-infested fish has increased drastically in the past several years, especially within recent weeks.

"While fishing this past weekend, I caught eight sheephead at different locations throughout the Bay and six of them had the bleeding sores on their bodies," Snellings said in a letter to the editor. Snelling could not be reached by telephone.

"Are they caused by industrial pollution or is there another possible reason for so many...to show up with such sores? Could they possibly be safe to eat?" Snelling continued.

Paul Seckso, another veteran fisherman of local waters, also has noticed a marked increase of ulcerous lesions on fish caught in the bay.

According to Seckso, 50 percent of the sheephead he caught on a recent trip had the sores. He also has caught several flounders with marks on them and red streaks in their meat.

"I've been fishing in the bay for about 35 years and I've never noticed anything like this, other than parasites in trout," Seckso said.

After having to release so many of the fish he might otherwise have eaten, Seckso decided he would try to find the cause of the sores. He contacted Dr. Robin Overstreet, a parasitologist with the Gulf Coast Research Laboratory in Ocean Springs.

"We saw something similar to this with sheephead several years ago. That was due to stress caused by long-time exposure to low salinity water. If it were caused by pollution, many species should have the lesions," Overstreet said.

While his first guess is that the sores are caused by a low salinity situation, he said he cannot be certain until tests have been conducted on live specimens of the fish.

Determining if industrial pollutants are involved is a complicated procedure because each chemical must be tested for individually.

"If someone suspects a particular pollution, they should let us know that, so we test for that specific one," Overstreet said.

Overstreet has supplied Seckso with a holding tank in which to keep infected fish alive until tissue samples can be taken from them.

Seckso said he was returning Friday afternoon to a spot where he had caught several of the afflicted fish, in an attempt to catch one for Overstreet.

Favre establishes goals, announces appointees

BY D.C. HARVILL

At his first city council meeting as the new mayor of Bay St. Louis Wednesday evening, Edward Favre announced his immediate plans for the city and his appointments to key positions in his administration.

In outlining his plans, Favre touched upon seven subjects he feels need to be addressed immediately.

First on the mayor's list is a city-wide cleanup program, with emphasis on the anti-litter campaign.

"If we can get the city clean it will be an incentive for people to take pride in the city and help in keeping it clean," he said.

In order to help stem the city's crime rate, Favre wants to reinstate the Neighborhood Watch program.

"This will assist in crime prevention, but will also serve as a community meeting at which residents can discuss problems with their city council representatives. It's a good way to get people involved in city government," Favre said.

To assist established businesses and to help locate potential businesses that would fit into the community, the mayor's plans call for the creation of a local Development Council.

With the enormous amount of rain received by the city recently several problems have surfaced in the city's drainage system. Favre hopes to implement a drainage program that will identify the cause of those problems and solve them.

The program would also call for cleaning of all the city's more efficiently handle the problems associated with maintaining the city's streets and utilities.

The mayor also plans to begin talks with Waveland and Hancock County officials to reestablish the Hancock County Multi-jurisdictional Drug Taskforce.

Such a taskforce was established last year but was short-lived because of conflicts between the three component entities.

The biggest task needing immediate attention, however, is an overhauling of the city's zoning ordinance and zoning map, according to the mayor.

"We have to look at the entire city and decide what we want to look like in the next 25 years. The new zoning should preserve the character of the city's established residential areas while providing for the city's future growth and development," he said.

To fill the position of city clerk and head of the city's Department of Administration, that he vacated upon becoming mayor, Favre appointed Kay Johnson. The appointment was approved by the council.

"There is a great deal to learn about government operations but my education and professional background has prepared me to meet the challenges.

By reorganizing the city's maintenance work force into regular crews and emergency crews, Favre hopes the city can

Reflections On Life

By Father Jerome LeDoux, SVD

The spirit gives life

One of the rites of spring was again in full swing toward the end of May, as my friend marched smartly in red robe and mortarboard. However, I was not watching my friend very much. Yes, I was quite aware of her presence, but my eyes kept going back to a person whom she had never mentioned in my presence.

That person had been ushered in and positioned before any of the other high school graduates, immediately commanding the attention of everyone in the arena. At the proper juncture, he was inserted into the line of graduates filing up the aisle.

Then came the great moment of the evening. His position toward the end of the alphabet stretched the suspense a bit. Minutes before him, a paraplegic wheeled herself up and made off with her diploma to the loud applause of the crowd.

As he finally moved in to receive his diploma, even the shrill adolescents, who had been screaming like hordes of off-key frogs, fell silent. He grasped his diploma with his left hand which was minus the digital finger. He could not shake hands with his right hand, because he had none. Everyone started in amazement at his wheelchair, observing plainly that he had no legs at all.

While he held his diploma in triumph, the crowd began a low clap, then stood and exploded in a standing ovation. The shrill, frog-like adolescents were back, this time sounding strangely on-key with their screaming and whistling.

This fellow, of course, I had to meet; so I sought him out as soon as the arena had cleared after the commencement exercises. "I'm looking for Jonathan Roy Shaw!" I kept telling various people while I circulated among the crowd.

Finally, there he was: smiling, obviously overjoyed, slight of build, and incredibly small, his leanness accentuated by the absence of one arm and especially by the lack of thighs.

None of that daunted him. Reinforced by his grandmother who stood proudly at his side, his infectious smile persisted, even as he tried to solve the mystery behind my face and clerical dress.

"Yes, I was born this way," he answered without hesitation when I asked him how his condition had come about. "My mother was very nauseated while she was pregnant with me. So her doctor prescribed a medicine to control her nausea. But, as you can see, the medicine had some bad side effects."

In utter amazement, I stood there watching him, studying him with a warm feeling of admiration and approval. Gradually, I resumed questioning him: "Was it difficult to get your studies done with just one arm?"

"It wasn't easy, but I got used to it. You put your mind to it and you simply do what you have to do."

"Do you plan to go to college anywhere?" I continued.

"Yes, I plan to go to LSU. I am going to major in mechanical engineering or in accounting."

"You've done wonders!" I told him. "Hang in there as you have been doing. Either field which you are pondering is a good one, and you will do well in either. God bless you and be with you in everything you will ever do!"

I walked away in deep thought about my graduating friend who often complained about difficulties in studies and with teachers, not to mention problems at home. With some shame, I wondered what reasonably whole and healthy people like myself could do if we would forego complaining and allow our spirit to power our body.

The solution to cataracts has never been clearer than it is now, at Slidell Memorial.

Sight. For most of us, it's everything. But when cataracts take it away, there's no treatment, no medication. Just surgery.

And now cataract surgery is more successful than ever, thanks to a NASA scientist who developed a high-technology intraocular lens (IOL) implant, polished for smoothness and clarity. This new lens is the most advanced IOL available.

And it's available in this area only at Slidell Memorial. Which means you don't have to go to a hospital in New Orleans to get your sight back.

Cataract surgery at Slidell Memorial, using a variety of IOL implants, is performed on an out-patient basis under local anesthesia, usually in less than an hour. Improvement begins at once, with normal vision returning in just weeks.

Post-operative care prevents infection and inflammation, and ensures the IOL's stability and the normal healing of the eyes. Some patients may require glasses to correct vision fully.

Slidell Memorial's cataract program is one of the ways we treat medical problems that require advanced treatment, conveniently close to home.

For medical solutions that work with you and for you, the clear choice is Slidell Memorial.

GUEST EDITORIAL

We, the people, are the flag

We, the people, Old Glory—red, white and blue. What do you see in it? What does it mean to you? What does it really represent? Think about these questions and see if you are not really part of the flag and what it means. Think, too, of this question: If Americans do not honor their own flag, who will?

What do we see when we look at the flag of the United States? What does it mean? For what does it stand?

In an idyllic sense, Old Glory is the symbol of all the fine things for which this nation stood at the time of its founding and the wondrous opportunities it has afforded since that small beginning.

In the words of George Washington, "We take the stars and blue from heaven, the red from our mother country, separating it by white stripes, thus showing we have separated from her, and the white shall go down to posterity representing liberty."

The flag has been through many a war. It has stood in the face of danger and has flown over many heroic deeds. It has inspired poets and brought forth songs. It has been respected most of the time and revered some of the time. It has, in recent days, been mistreated, neglected, and downright disrespected.

To some the flag means love, freedom, tranquility and justice. To some, a glimpse of Old Glory recalls stories of Valley Forge, of Gettysburg, of Guadalcanal, of Iwo Jima, of Korea and Vietnam.

What does the flag mean? What does it mean to you personally? We can hardly respect and revere the flag unless we know what it means, unless we really feel deep inside that we ought to hold the flag in high esteem.

I was reading a well-written patriotic article recently in a publication circulated nationally. It told the story of Old Glory in first person, speaking as if the words were those of the flag. It recalled how years ago parades were held on July Fourth and Veterans Day, and on the national holidays, and how everyone showed respect to the flag and saluted in the approved manner.

It was a convincing article, until it said something about inspiring Francis Scott Key to write The Star-Spangled Banner at Fort Sumter. The writer was obviously mistaken, unaware that our national anthem was written by Key at Fort McHenry, Baltimore, in 1814, following a night of bombardment.

The flag makers of 1777 did not reveal why they chose the colors red, white and blue. But, in 1782 the Department of State attributed these meanings to the colors. Red stands for hardness and courage, white is the symbol of hope, purity and innocence; blue, the color of heaven, stands for loyalty, friendship, justice, truth and reverence for God.

This interpretation of the colors is idealistic, taking into account the loftiest thoughts of our forefathers. The wonderful thing about Old Glory is that our forefathers made this interpretation of the flag come true. This came to be the meaning of Old Glory to the people of the world—in all nations everywhere.

Because of the freedom for which it stood and the people of the nation who represented it, the flag of the United States of America came to be loved and respected all around the world, and the nation for which it stood as a symbol became known as the land of opportunity.

Why was this true? It was because the flag was not just a set of colors and stripes, but a statement of lofty ideals. It was not just something hanging in the breeze. The flag became synonymous with the people of the United States, and when others saw our flag they did not think of it as simply a national symbol but they thought of the people who made up our nation as it grew and became stronger and stronger.

Yes, the people are what make a flag. They make it great or they fail to make it great, for the people really are the things which the flag symbolizes. If our people are brave and strong and just and lovers of freedom, then our flag stands for bravery and strength and justice and freedom.

You are the flag of the United States today. You are what is meant by Old Glory in the minds of people all around the world. What you think of your flag they will also think. If you honor Old Glory and live up to its high ideals, then they, too, will honor the flag.

If you neglect to honor your flag, if you burn your draft card, if you wave the flag of the enemy of our nation, if you drag our national flag in the dust, and if you desecrate the flag, then other peoples around the world will not respect it either.

Unfortunately, in recent years, some Americans have so conducted themselves that they have tarnished the good name of Old Glory. They have blackened the purity of the white stripes and by their actions have faded the beautiful red which stood for courage.

It has stood for truth and honor, and it, too, has faded. Sometimes it even appears the Old Glory is tattered and torn, ravaged by our unthinking and wanton acts. Americans who today cast aspersions on Old Glory don't see the protection and the proud heritage which it represents.

A young boy wrote for an essay contest on the flag: "Although the flag of the United States represents a glorious heritage and a great nation, it also has to suffer from the dark side of our country. Too many people are in the prison system, and the flag represents this something that is not wonderful. The United States is far from a perfect nation and there are a great many problems left unsolved. These problems include pollution in the water and air, poverty, prejudice, drugs, runaway inflation, rioting, campus unrest, a high crime rate, and many, many more."

Remember the point that the flag stands for the bad as well as the good. It is not just a symbol of the good, but it is a symbol of the bad, too. The people themselves, but they are the people of the United States. It is not just a symbol of the good, but it is a symbol of the bad, too. The people themselves, but they are the people of the United States.

Remember that the flag is "Yours" and that the next time somebody desecrates your flag it is a disgrace to you. I hope that millions of Americans will rise up and make Old Glory the most respected flag anywhere in the world.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

GCRL contacted to investigate fish sores

Dear Editor:

In the June 29 edition of the Sea Coast Echo there was a letter from Mr. Elliot G. Snelling of Waveland on the topic of "Bleeding Sores on Fish."

Approximately one week prior to reading Mr. Snelling's letter I was in telephone contact with Dr. Robin Overstreet with Gulf Coast Research Laboratories, who is sponsored by The University of Southern Mississippi, regarding this same subject.

Also, I invited Dr. Overstreet's attention to several flounders that I had caught recently in the Bay area which had red spots in their meat. Upon Dr. Overstreet's request I sent him one of the flounders via one of his assistants who lives in the Bay area. I am awaiting a reply.

Dr. Overstreet suggested that the bleeding sores on the sheephead is probably a bacterial infection caused by lack of salinity in the water. Like Mr. Snelling, I have fished these waters for more than 35 years and have seen many varying conditions of water, including lack of salinity, but I have never seen fish with such terrible sores.

By copy of this letter and Mr. Snelling's letter, I am requesting Dr. Overstreet to investigate this condition and if possible find the cause. Many of us in the Bay-Waveland area depend upon fish from the Bay and the surrounding area as a food source, also for recreational purposes, boating, skiing and swimming and it behooves us all to pursue the cause of this "bacterial" infection of our fish. I trust you, as editor, will also do your part.

Thank you for your attention. Yours truly, Paul N. Seckso Bay St. Louis

IN CONGRESS

By Congressman
LARKIN SMITH

The flag: a testimony to our national loyalty

In his inaugural address to the nation, John Fitzgerald Kennedy reminded us that "since this country was founded, each generation of Americans has been summoned to give testimony to its national loyalty."

Now, nearly three decades later, the United States Supreme Court declares it OK to burn the American flag. What kind of testimony is this to the legacy of our founding fathers?

This court decision tips the scales in favor of rampant individualism over the weight of the community interest. We must right those scales.

We need only look at the situation in China to remind us that freedom of expression is essential to a democracy. Yet even in a democracy, freedom is bound by practical and reasonable limits.

Desecrating the Lincoln Memorial or the Washington Monument would certainly not be a protected action under the right of free speech. I say that desecrating the flag should not be free of penalty either.

Why should we also protect the flag?

The answer can be found in the words of Chief Justice William Rehnquist, in his dissenting opinion on the Supreme Court's horrendous 5-4 decision:

"The flag symbolizes the nation in peace as well as in war," Rehnquist states. "It signifies our national presence on battlefields, airplanes, military installations, and public buildings from the United States Capitol to the thousands of county courthouses and city halls throughout the country. Countless flags are placed by the graves of loved ones each year on what was first called Decoration Day, and now is called Memorial Day. The flag is traditionally placed on the casket of deceased members of the armed forces, and it is later given to the deceased's family."

"No other American symbol has been as universally honored as the flag," Rehnquist continues. "In 1931, Congress declared 'The Star Spangled Banner' to be our national anthem. In 1949, Congress declared June 14 to be Flag Day. In 1987, John Philip Sousa's 'The Stars and Stripes Forever' was designated as the national march."

"...the American flag, then, throughout more than 200 years of our history, has come to be the visible symbol embodying our nation. It does not represent the views of any particular party, and it does not represent any particular political philosophy. The flag is not simply another 'idea' or 'point of view' competing for recognition in the marketplace of ideas. Millions and millions of Americans regard it with an almost mystical reverence regardless of what sort of social, political, or philosophical beliefs they have."

I know you and I agree with what Chief Justice Rehnquist told the five justices who voted to protect the right of a self-promoting and avowed communist.

That is why I am proud to be a sponsor of the Republican leadership's proposed constitutional amendment to protect the flag of the United States. And this is why I joined more than 30 of my colleagues—both Democrats and Republicans—on June 29 in an all-night speech-making session in support of the flag.

What better testimony to our founding fathers than to save the flag that represents everything they fought for, and what better time than this, the 213th anniversary of independence?

"QUOTABLE QUOTES"

By Ellis C. Cuevas

In recent years we have been hearing and reading about aquaculture being developed where it can be applied commercially.

The Japanese and other nations have been involved in aquaculture for many years and have been rather successful in many ventures.

Last week's announcement by the Hancock County Board of Supervisors that Sea Fresh Farms, Inc., will construct a facility on 1,470 acres in the Ansley area is very good news for Hancock County.

The redfish farm, which is scheduled to produce some one million pounds of seafood annually, is reported to bring some 300 initial jobs to our county.

The number of persons employed in the seafood industry has been dwindling for many years in Hancock County. It is very good to hear about an increase in an industry which at one time played an important role in the economy of this county.

Buz Olsen, Hancock County Port and Harbor Commission executive director, and our port and harbor commissioners, on behalf of our elected officials, have all been working very hard trying to secure more jobs for our county.

In addition to growing redfish, there will be support facilities such as a feed mill, processing plant, quick-freezing plant, frozen storage, and an electricity and steam co-generation plant.

I wish Sea Fresh Farms developer Robert Hunt a lot of success in his Hancock County venture and will be looking forward to visiting his modern day fish farm.

Hubert Cowand, who was involved in a Bay High School reunion several years ago, is at it again.

This time, the celebration will be over a three-day period; it is for those who attended the old Bay High School and even the friends of former students are invited.

The big event is scheduled for Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 22, 23 and 24.

Cowand and organizers of the reunion are looking for an attendance of more than 400.

The "Tiger search team" includes Cowand, Gulfport, 896-0803; Beverly Davis Potts, New Orleans, 504-833-9602; and from Bay St. Louis, Bertha Koch Morris, 255-9492; Jim Evans, 467-9861; and Pat Murphy, 467-6453.

It sounds like the reunion will be a blast.

On Tuesday night, the Hancock County Fitness Trail will officially open with a ribbon cutting ceremony.

The Hancock County Board of Supervisors and Park Commission sponsored event will be at 7 p.m. There will be entertainment, demonstrations and refreshments.

The fitness trail is located on Highway 90 in front of the Hancock Medical Center.

Hilda Bourg, county recreation director, reports the track, which is already being heavily used, should be competed within weeks. Some of the finishing touches have been delayed because of severe rains.

The Hancock County Chamber of Commerce and Bay-Waveland Garden Club will do landscaping as soon as permitted by weather.

I have walked the trail numerous times and I am impressed with the number of persons of all ages now walking.

I have even seen kids in strollers, including one boy only 10 weeks old being pushed by his mother.

The event is open to the public and I hope there will be a large turnout Tuesday for the dedication.

Technologically improved Secretary of State's office is also a money-maker

Secretary of State Dick Molyneux announced that his office will return to the state treasury $871,000 in profit generated during the 1989 fiscal year.

This will mark the fourth straight year that Molyneux's office has made a profit for the taxpayers. A total of $3.5 million has been returned since the end of fiscal 1986. Fiscal 1989 ended last Friday.

"When I became Secretary of State in 1984, this office was a $200,000 a year drain on the taxpayers," Molyneux said. "Not only have we turned it into a profit center for state government, we have done it while automating and dramatically improving our service."

The Mississippi Secretary of State's office is now recognized as one of the most technologically advanced in the nation. The 1989 fiscal year saw implementation of a new high-speed electronic information system that provides businesses immediate access to Uniform Commercial Code and corporate public records on file with the Secretary of State.

"Previously, tracking down some of this information could take days, even weeks," Molyneux said. "Now it can be done in minutes, meaning the elimination of unnecessary delays in business transactions."

The new system, dubbed SUCCESS (Statewide UCC and Corporate Communications Exchange from the Secretary of State) recently received a merit Award from the International Association of Corporation Administrators.

Molyneux said that early in this tenure as Secretary of State he went to heavy users of the office's services and asked if they would be willing to pay fees equal to the Southeastern average for faster and more efficient service. The answer was uniformly yes, he said.

"The result has been much better service for users and over $3.5 million returned to the taxpayers," Molyneux said. "It's a situation where everybody has benefited."

That's probably the most realistic statement I can make. I love being around, but most cars—especially Pinto wagon I don't give up until it lets me.

It is definitely a relationship. I love my car on a rainy day, cold, and a vehicle handy storage space for tools and you have a small car.

I use cars as a private talk to my husband more on the way home than we do at home. Is there to do while ing or riding?

I love cars?

I love cars.

That's probably the most sarcastic statement I could possibly make. I love being able to get around, but mostly I detest cars—especially a small blue Pinto wagon I don't intend to give up until it literally dies on me.

It is definitely a love-hate relationship. I love having the car on a rainy day or when it's cold, and a vehicle provides handy storage space for dirty stuff like tools and cans of oil if you have a small utility room.

Cars are great if you're going to the grocery store and planning to come back with more than two bags. They are not as good for moving bigger things, like furniture, but they're not so bad.

I use cars as a private place to talk to my husband. We talk more on the way here and there than we do at home. What else is there to do while you're driving or riding?

I have also seen cars with wonderful stereo systems I'd like to take out and put in my living room.

That's where the love ends and the hatred begins.

How many people can relate to the idea of cars as less than reliable?

Take Thursday, for example, which was my day off. My 10-year-old junk heap, which has 90,000 miles on it, gave me the raspberry when I tried to start it.

Cars always quit on you at the most inconvenient times. This one was a little less inconvenient than usual, but there is no convenient time for a dead car.

I scanned the neighborhood for someone to give me a jumpstart, but on a weekday morning most people are working.

Because he was the first one I saw who was home, I asked my dog Corky Scott if he had any ideas. My frustration level wasn't reduced when he demonstrated his opinion on the corner of the fence.

I finally remembered a friend was on vacation and called him. He said he'd be there in five minutes.

My do-it-yourself mentality sometimes backfires on me, as it did when I decided to back the car out of the driveway before my helper arrived. The little sucker got away from me and plastered its rear bumper to my fence.

After the car thoroughly embarrassed me by doing that, I had to buy it a new battery. Is that enough? No way. The little money-eater wants a new muffler next week.

I have been fortunate—I haven't had to buy extremely expensive work for this car. It's not like when the transmission fell out of my last car, which was also my car. I always keep them 'til they die.

My brother David put it like this: "Dena looks at a car like a Bic lighter—Buy a cheap one, wear it out and then throw it away."

David knows. He and my other brother Dennis put the second engine in my last car. I learned how to make some of my own repairs through that project, which tied up Dad's carport for three days.

My husband Joe has different ideas about cars; he loves them, especially new ones. He wants to buy me a new car as a graduation present when I finish college next summer.

Joe, of course, is an electronics technician and likes gadgets. New cars have tons of those, including hundreds of buttons which do things like open windows or fix a gas pedal so you don't have to use your foot.

Now, that pedal thing must be great for a handicapped driver, but for me, that's giving way too much control to the vehicle.

Not having paid much attention to new cars because I don't plan on buying one anytime soon, I have never driven a car that wasn't second-hand or a little old.

When Joe got a company car, I sneaked out and cranked it up to check out the sound system. Before I found it, I opened and closed three windows, locked myself in, started the windshield wipers and couldn't get them off, activated the left turn signal, did something strange to change the way the steering wheel sat, got the running lights to go, released the hood latch and gave up on the stereo.

Car manufacturers have added something besides better sound; that's all I can say. My mother's little Japanese car talks and has lights to tell her when she's low on gasoline. Maybe one day, someone will come up with one which warns you before the transmission falls out.

Of course, that car will probably have all kinds of buttons and look like a "Star Wars" fighter plane. When technology advances that far, I'm going back to walking. A car that sophisticated probably won't want to go out in the rain.

Other appointees carried over from the previous administration are John A. Scaffide Jr., city attorney; George Lipscomb, municipal judge; and Henry Cook, city prosecutor.

Free booklet available on coronary disease

Someone dies from heart disease every 32 seconds. It is the leading cause of death in the U.S., claiming 540,000 lives every year. But what causes heart attacks? How can they be prevented? Who is most at risk and why?

These and many other basic questions are answered in layman's terms in Some Answers About Coronary Heart Disease, the latest publication on heart disease from the American Heart Assistance Foundation.

To understand coronary heart disease and its causes, it is important to know how the heart works, how it can be damaged, and what can be done to keep it healthy.

But for many people, finding this information, presented in terms they can understand, is not always easy. For this reason, AHAF has produced a new booklet that answers these and many other questions in clear and concise language.

In addition to answering many of the most commonly asked questions concerning coronary heart disease, this new publication also provides a list of additional references covering such topics as proper diet, exercise, preventive care, and what to do after suffering a heart attack.

Some Answers About Coronary Heart Disease has been published as a community service by AHAF as part of the Foundation's Coronary Heart Disease Research program, which provides funding for heart disease research projects.

It is available to the public at no cost. To obtain additional copies of this publication for groups or special events, write or call the American Heart Assistance Foundation, 15825 Shady Grove Road, Suite 140, Rockville, MD 20850, 1-800-227-7998.

The American Heart Assistance Foundation is a non-profit organization whose primary purpose is to fund scientific research of age-related and degenerative disease, educate the public about these diseases, and provide financial assistance to Alzheimer's disease patients and their caregivers.

SHOPPING UP A STORM

By Katie
McGuire Caire

I could almost become a vegetarian these summer days, with the wonderfully colorful array of fresh fruits and vegetables of all sorts on display at area supermarkets—but then, my eyes rove to the many meat choices on hand, and my mouth starts watering at the very thought of a juicy roast or steak or what have you!

Well, a balanced diet is all to the good, isn't it? Winn-Dixie is into its second week of the "Big Beef Sale" with a cut and price to everyone's taste and budget.

Sometimes I think that the only reason I cook a steak or roast is for the leftovers! Not really, but in these humid days I like to follow the principle of "cooking big" once and utilizing the leftovers for other meals right away, or stashing portions away in the freezer for days when sun and sand and sea make one go on "reluctant feet" into the kitchen to prepare a meal!

So, I've just brought home a sirloin tip roast from Winn-Dixie which I shall roast by my usual method—sear quickly first, then continue roasting in an open pan, splashing with wine and basting from time to time.

For another meal, I heat the pan juices and add slices of the beef—always heat the sauce or gravy, then add the meat, lest you toughen left-over beef!

Left-over beef, cut into julienne strips, is a delicious addition to the salad bowl, also.

Still in the meat line, I also brought home a sliced quarter-loin from National and cooked up:

PORK CHOPS IN WINE

4 center-cut pork chops, 1 inch thick
3 Tbsp. butter or margarine
1 Tbsp. olive oil
2 Tbsp. minced green onions
1 cup dry white wine
1 cup water
1 Tbsp. minced fresh parsley
Flour
Pepper, salt to your taste

Salt and pepper the chops, and lightly dredge in flour. Heat butter and oil in a heavy iron skillet and brown chops on both sides.

Add onions, wine and water. Lower the heat and simmer for 1½ hours or until tender. Remove to a heated platter and sprinkle with parsley. (Four servings.)

—From Encore Cookbook
And, let's not forget the array of salad lettuce at Delchamps. I like to mix several—Boston, red leaf, ice berg and so on—and drizzle over a dressing with chunks of blue cheese, sometimes adding strips of chicken and ham and chunks of onion. Delicious!

With the abundance of fresh fruit available at our supermarkets, dessert is no problem these lazy summer days.

Frankly, I prefer to "dig into" watermelon and canteloupes and such "as is" without embellishments, but at times, I like to go a bit more fancy.

Sometimes, I like to chop up various other fruits along with the melons, such as the peaches so abundant at Jitney Jungle, along with seedless grapes and nectarines, and serve with this:

FRUIT DIP

1 cup sour cream
1/2 cup powdered sugar
1 tsp. lemon juice
1 tsp. grated lemon rind.
Mix all well together and serve with sliced or cubed or chopped fruit of your choice.

How most people deal with the symptoms of a heart attack.

Hiding from a problem doesn't make it go away. In fact, hiding from the symptoms of a heart attack can make the problem worse. Much worse.

Be alert to heart attack symptoms. Chest pain and pressure are the most common. Pain may radiate down your arm, neck or shoulder. There's also shortness of breath. Cold sweat. Dizziness. Faintness and nausea.

Sometimes only a few symptoms occur. Sometimes more. Sometimes the symptoms can even be due to another problem.

Only one thing is certain. The sooner heart problems are treated, the better your chance of recovery.

That's why we're here. The Heart Emergency Service at NorthShore Regional Medical Center is the first of its kind in this area. Located in our Emergency Department, we save lives by detecting heart problems rapidly and providing necessary treatment.

If you experience any symptoms of a heart attack, get immediate medical attention. Anytime, day or night, you can call our emergency 24-Hour Heartline™ at 1-800-HEART-13. An emergency care professional is available around the clock to answer questions, give advice or even dispatch an ambulance if necessary.

24-Hr. Heartline
1-800-HEART-13

The Heart Center at NorthShore Regional Medical Center offers a complete range of cardiac care services. That's important to you during those first critical hours following a heart attack. And although you'll probably never need them, it's good to know our heart team is available 24 hours a day.

We employ powerful clot-dissolving drugs that can save lives by stopping and, in some instances, actually reversing the effects of heart attacks. The sooner these drugs are administered the better the chance of a complete recovery.

And advanced diagnostic capabilities, including our state-of-the-art cardiac catheterization laboratory, help us assess and treat heart problems more accurately and effectively than ever.

We also offer educational programs that help people prevent heart attacks, and rehabilitation services that help heart patients recover faster and more fully.

Learn more about The Heart Center at NorthShore Regional Medical Center by calling (504) 641-MDMD and we'll send you a free brochure that describes our cardiac services in greater detail.

Remember, don't hide from any symptoms of a heart attack. Go to the nearest hospital emergency department. If you're close to NorthShore Regional Medical Center, use the Heart Emergency Service in our Emergency Department located just east of Interstate 10 on 190—Exit 266—Gause Boulevard. Working with latchkey children

Former latchkey child finds more children at home alone

BY DENA BISNETTE

Hancock County Extension Home Economist Darlene Underwood knows about latchkey children. She was one, years before the term "latchkey child" became popular.

When she gave a seminar on being home alone for Waveland Elementary School fifth graders, however, Underwood found some statistics she hadn't expected.

An informal survey of the fifth graders indicated not only that the seminar should have targeted a younger group of children, but that at least 50 percent of the children in the group were latchkey children at least part of the time.

Underwood said the results of a self-reporting survey on children can not be regarded as completely accurate, particularly because it was conducted after she talked to them about being alone.

Some may have stated they were latchkey children because they had been left alone a few times and therefore thought they qualified, she explained. Even with adjustments for this type of response, the survey results activated her interest.

In February, Underwood attended the Governor's Conference on Child Care in Jackson to find out more about children caring for themselves—and what can be done to help them.

"I don't think people realize just how prevalent this is," she said.

Norine Barnes, family life specialist for the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service, told Underwood that 21 percent of all American children from birth to 18 years old, or about 4,680,000 to 6,760,000 children, can be considered latchkey.

In Mississippi, that percentage is higher, with between 164,000 and 237,000 children fitting in that category.

Underwood isn't sure exactly how prevalent the situation is in Hancock County, but the percentage may be even higher than that for the state.

"One reason we really don't have hard statistics is that most parents hide the fact that children are home alone," she said.

"Sometimes it's to protect the child. Sometimes the parents feel bad about it, but they have no alternative."

As home economist, she has heard many complaints about a shortage of affordable child care facilities, particularly for people working night or unusual shifts or receiving a limited income.

In addition, the governor's conference indicated that Mississippi only has about half the number of child care facilities which is actually needed.

Mississippi also currently has a state law prohibiting school systems from sponsoring after-school programs, which Underwood hopes will soon be amended.

There has a success story in Starkville, where an independent group rents school facilities to provide such a program, but these are rare so far. The only similar program Underwood has found is in Jackson, where an extended school day is provided for children from kindergarten through sixth grade.

Outside Mississippi, there have been some cases of major companies providing contracted day care services for its employees. It has been found that employees perform better when they are confident about child care.

Underwood cites an example of this implemented by an airline, saying, "If you've got a plane in a holding pattern for an hour and a half and you've got a stewardess with a kid who has to be picked up by five, you know her mind won't be on her work."

She is not certain how local companies with smaller numbers of employees could provide child care, but does feel that after school and extended school day programs may offer possibilities for latchkey children in Hancock County.

When Underwood was a latchkey child, she had relatives nearby and could call on them when she needed assistance. For many children, that is no longer true.

"The world has changed a lot in 25 years," she commented.

Historically, the extended family provided child care when women began going into the work force and when divorce became more prevalent, but with today's mobile society, extended families are becoming less common and the need for outside-the-home care, particularly after school or during vacations, has increased dramatically.

Underwood found that the most common application of the term "latchkey child" refers to a youngster under 14 years old without an older sibling present. Although much of the literature she has gathered on the subject said that children average about eight years old when they begin caring for themselves; they are almost all older than six.

According to some of the studies on these kids, latchkey children may perform household chores and the older ones may even operate appliances ranging from microwave ovens to clothes dryers.

An appliance company found that more than a quarter of those included in the survey operate microwave ovens, for example, but under 20 percent cook on the stove top, and these were usually the older children.

"I was a latchkey child in the fifth grade and I cooked, but I thought I was old enough to do it and my mother thought I was old enough to do it," Underwood said, adding that as an adult, she realizes that both were probably expecting too much of a child.

However, Underwood said, she had specific rules she was to follow which her mother had discussed with her before leaving her alone.

How much a child may do when he is alone is generally up to the parents. Many, particularly those in inner city or high

Advice for parents of latchkey children

The Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service provides the following advice for parents who have latchkey children or are considering self-care for their child. A brochure containing this information and more is available from the Hancock County Cooperative Extension Service at 725-A Dunbar Ave., Bay St. Louis.

—Communicate with the child and listen as he expresses feelings and concerns. Explain the options available and find out what the child thinks about them. If the child is afraid, self-care may not be the best option.

—Consider the age and maturity of the child and whether the community in which you live is stable and supportive. Also find out what kind of recreation areas are available and the ages and numbers of other children in the neighborhood.

—For children who must stay at home alone during after-school hours, consider a music lesson, club meeting or athletic activity at least one day each week. This may help break the monotony for the child.

—A parent must be completely comfortable about the decision to let a child stay alone, or that anxiety will be passed on to the youngster.

—Making a home as burglar-proof as possible and installing good exterior lighting can increase the child's sense of security.

—A child should be told not to enter a home if he finds a door open, a window broken or anything unusual. He should be given instructions to call from a neighbor's home or store and be told not to enter the home until an adult arrives.

—Provide the child with emergency instructions, including how to call an ambulance, police or the fire department.

—Find out which adults who live nearby can be relied upon to help the child and make certain someone is always available when you are away.

—It is important for the child to be able to use the telephone and many parents ask that the child call one of them upon arriving home. If possible, parents should call the child once or twice after that. If the parents continually call home and the phone is busy, call waiting service is available.

—Planned activities to keep the child occupied help reduce anxiety, as does the presence of a pet.

—Specific house rules should be discussed with the child beforehand. Children should be told what to do if a stranger comes to the house, whether they may go out and whether friends may visit. It also helps to establish a specific routine, including a checklist of daily chores.

—Establishing an afternoon snack for the child as part of the routine can be accomplished by leaving a note or a prepared snack.

—A safety kit containing change for telephone calls, a list of important phone numbers, an identification card and cab or bus fare can help a child feel more prepared for emergencies.

—Parents should let the child know what time they will be home and try to be punctual.

crime areas, must stay indoors, can not have friends over and are allowed only one phone call to the mother's workplace due to employers' restrictions on personal calls. Their main companion is a television set.

"I think the most important thing, if the parents think they have no other option, is the need to take time to talk to the kid," Underwood said.

Children in general can cope better if they understand rules, what chores they are to do and how they should fill their time alone.

"Some children are emotionally better able to handle staying by themselves. If they feel like they can cope, they probably can," Underwood added. "If they're not emotionally ready but have been told their parents don't have other options, they're doing it but probably not doing it very well."

She has found that some parents offer their children little or no guidance for times when they are alone and has found this to be a problem.

"What happens when the child is 13 and the parents try to tell him, 'You're not old enough to do such-and-such,' and this kid's been making decisions all that time?" she asked.

While looking toward more long-range solutions, Underwood and the extension homemakers clubs are providing something that they hope will at least give latchkey children more confidence.

Beginning this fall, the homemakers plan to begin working with fourth graders in the city and county schools, teaching them about being home alone. Underwood is also offering the same seminar she gave at Waveland last year to any organization working with children, and may be reached for more information at 467-5456.

WEDDINGS, ENGAGEMENTS

Simonson-Barnes

Main Street United Methodist Church was the setting for the June 3 marriage of Dianne Kim Barnes of Waveland and Lars Stuart Simonson of Norfolk, Va.

The Reverend Van Carpenter officiated at the afternoon double ring ceremony.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Barnes of Waveland. The groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Simonson of Diamondhead.

Fresh floral arrangements, live greenery and baby's breath adorned the sanctuary.

Organist Mrs. Jeanne Smith provided nuptial music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white bridal satin with embroidered scalloped neckline, fitted embroidered bodice and airy scalloped sleeves worn off-the-shoulder. The full chiffon skirt featured an embroidered overlay, while the cathedral train was highlighted by a scalloped embroidered edge.

Her waltz length veil was attached to a tiara of embroidered lace highlighted with a cluster of mini-pearls. Alternating pearl loops framed the right side of the tiara.

The bride carried an arm bouquet of rubrum lilies, white roses and assorted tiny pink and white blossoms, spring greenery and baby's breath, accented with white satin lace ribbon.

Della LaCour of Slidell, sister of the bride, and Kellee Price of Chalmette, La. were matron and maid of honor, respectively.

Debra Barnes of Meridian, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid.

The attendants were identically attired in tea length dresses of pastel aqua, each with white lace overlay on the sleeves. The V-fashioned bodice featured a Victorian neckline on a sheer English net yoke with low back accented with a large bow below the back waistline. They wore wrist length white lace gloves and carried arm bouquets of rubrum lilies, candidum lilies and spring greenery with baby's breath and white satin lace ribbon.

Steve Simonson of Covington, brother of the groom, was best man.

Groomsmen were Tim Odom of Diamondhead, brother-in-law of the groom and Scott Barnes of Waveland, brother of the bride.

Mrs. Barnes chose for her daughter's wedding a peach contemporary length dress with embroidered scalloped neckline over a chiffon tiered bodice and skirt, trimmed in darker peach satin belt and cuffs.

The groom's mother was attired in a contemporary length beige linen dress with embroidered round neckline and cap sleeves.

A reception followed the ceremony at the Waveland Resort Inn, which was decorated with arrangements of pink and white carnations, fresh greenery and baby's breath and mixed floral arrangements.

Following a honeymoon tour of the French Quarter in New Orleans and river cruise on the Mississippi, the couple resides in Norfolk, Va., where the groom is stationed in the U. S. Navy.

On the eve of the wedding, the groom's parents entertained at the Diamondhead Yacht Club.

Washington welcome

Former Bay St. Louis residents Kelly and Janet McQueen were guests last week at the White House at a ceremony welcoming officials to the Republican Party. McQueen, a second term Picayune City Councilman, met with President George Bush and Vice President Dan Quayle for a photo session in the Oval Office and was introduced during the program which followed in the rose garden. In photos clockwise from top, Vice President Quayle hosted a reception for the officials in the Indian Treaty Room of the Executive Office Building; Republican National Committee Chairman Lee Atwater delivers a welcome address as President Bush looks on; Janet and Kelly McQueen; Mississippi Republican Party Chairman Evelyn McPhail of Diamondhead and McQueen.

Fall reunion planned by former BHS students

Special to the Echo
A committee organized by Hubert Cowand to search for former Bay High students met recently and finalized plans for the largest Bay High reunion ever to be held. The committee is looking for former students who attended Bay High for a day or longer during the existence of the original Bay High on Carroll and Ulman Avenues.

The reunion is not a class reunion or a graduation reunion, but a Bay High reunion for those who attended the school for a day or longer. Also, welcome are friends of former students who like to party with the friendly, super nice "Bay High Tigers."

Plans are being made for a three-day party starting at 7:30 p.m. on Friday, Sept. 22 at Diamondhead Country Club. The Friday night party will be informal and is planned so that those attending can spend the entire evening visiting with those whom they might not have seen in many years. The setting will include soft music and lighting, light hors d'oeuvres and a cash bar.

At noon on Saturday there will be a luncheon at Diamondhead Country Club with a style show by Princess Dress Shoppe. Saturday night is Big Band Night with Art Cissell and his 18-piece "Star Duster" band to play the tunes so popular over the years.

The evening will offer more time to visit with those who might have been missed on Friday night as well as dance or just listen to the band. Hors d'oeuvres, steamboat round of beef and a cash bar will be featured.

Festivities will conclude Sunday at noon at Diamondhead Country Club with a buffet brunch. This will take place in a private dining room reserved for the reunion group, featuring speeches, toasts and a surprise roast of a favorite person.

The 1987 reunion saw 225 in attendance, and according to Cowand 400 or more are expected to attend this year's function which will be the last reunion planned by this group.

For information or reservations, all former students or anyone else who would like to attend should contact one of the "Tiger Search Team" members who are:

Hubert Cowand, Gulfport, 601-896-0803; Beverly Davis Potts, New Orleans, 504-833-9602; Betha Koch Morris, Bay St. Louis, 255-9492; Jim Evans, Bay St. Louis, 467-9861; or Pat Murphy, Bay St. Louis, 467-6453.

BY D.C. HARVEY
 The Hancock County of Supervisors agreed to issue $2 million in revenue bonds for construction of a plant at Port Bienville for the production of a waste treatment chemical.
 The bonds are to be issued by By-Product Management Incorporated, a firm that produces ferric sulfate, an industrial chemical used in treatment of waters created by industrial operations.
 Industrial revenue bonds, which are sold to investors, place no burden on the taxpayers or the community.
 "I spoke with the county bank and they said they buy the bonds," County Attorney Robert Genin said.
 According to the county district manager Hap, ferric sulfate is the last treatment applied to industrial waste.
